

Proud to be a whiner

David Romano (Letters, June 21, "Why not ban whining?") asks sarcastically if private clubs, which will not be allowed to permit smoking after the ban takes effect at the end of next May, will be allowed to ban whining, self-righteous, paranoid health nuts from their establishments.

If wanting to be in a bar, restaurant, or private club where I don't have to breathe second-hand smoke, which has been medically proved to be dangerous, makes me a "whining, self-righteous, paranoid health nut," then sign me up.
